

KEEPING A CANARY FARM.

How a New York Workingman Adds to His Income Each Week.

A Hint for Those Who Have a Taste for the Sweet Singers.

The Story of a Dyed Poodle Which a Washington Bachelor Gave a Young Lady.

Industry and perseverance. Cleverness doesn't always count.

That is what a good many workmen said in effect to the question, "How can a man get on?"

Rudolph Keyes is a painter and a painter-hanger who makes no claim to be clever, but manages to add from $4 to $5 a week to his income, says the New York Journal, and thinks he sees a possibility of increasing it still further.

He lives in a five-room flat on Fourth avenue, Brooklyn, and works for a New York firm. He was seen yesterday by a reporter, and when asked how he added to his earnings, replied:

"By keeping canaries." He led the reporter into a well-lighted room, the windows facing the sun, in which cages of canaries and bullfinches were ranged about the walls.

"Now," he said, "I'm not one of your sky-scraping fellows who can't keep down every place and can't keep down any."

"I'm only a plain workingman. I had a fine, healthy family, which I was thankful for, but all my thinkfulness didn't make $15 or $20 a week go as far as $25."

Mr. Keyes stopped to snap his fingers at a pet canary, which was fluttering with delight at seeing him, and continued:

"Well, I say that I must not get into any place and that the children and attending to my meals took up all my time. I always had a great taste for breeding birds, and all at once, when I was in bed one night, I thought came into my head, 'Why shouldn't I breed and sell birds to help out my wages?' I told my wife about it the next day, and she thought it a good plan. I started in, and here I am."

"How much can you make by selling the birds?"

"In the breeding season I sometimes make as much as $10 or $12 a week, and then there will be weeks in which I make nothing. Taking it altogether, I suppose I make about $5 a week by the birds."

"How did you find customers at the first?"

"Among my fellow-workers. You'd be surprised how many of them bought birds, and it's a real pleasure for a workingman to have a singing bird in his house. I studied the habits of the birds and was very successful in breeding them, and my oldest boy, who has a taste for looking after them, sees to their care."

Mr. Keyes said that he was thinking seriously of taking a suitable place in New York or Brooklyn and starting a regular aviary when he had saved some more money.

A Dyed Poodle.

The very latest story is at the expense of a fashionable young woman here, who was presented the other day by an eligible bachelor of her acquaintance with a very small and very blue sky terrier. The smaller and the bluer a sky terrier is, you know, the more he costs, and the man doubtless paid a big price for the animal, which was received by its new mistress with the utmost delight. For a week the small brute was joy and a foot-stamp brought into the house, and the abatement of the dog's presence was a very painful and unexpected thing. At the end of a week it was perceived that "Mopsy" needed a bath. A cake of perfumed soap and a foot-stamp brought into requisition, and the abatement was performed, with the accompaniment of squeals from the victim and consolatory remarks of a sympathizing friend from the far side of the room. It was not until the conclusion of the exercises, however, that the tragic denouement arrived. The soap was sponged off the "precious darling," and the "lovely angel" was drawn shivering out of the water. And then—

And then—can you imagine the feelings of a diamond merchant who, upon attempting to clean a blue gem of purest ray serene, suddenly finds the blue tint come off with the soap and the stone transformed into a comparatively worthless amber-hued jewel? Clever ladies have often had such experiences.

And so it was with the fashionable young woman aforesaid. She drew the quondam sky terrier out of the bath tenderly, and found quaking in the towel an inky black dog of the "poodle" species, more common in Washington than anywhere else in the world, probably. "Mopsy" had been dyed—to tell the grim truth briefly—by the ingenious speculator who sold him to the eligible bachelor on a street corner. What to do with him the young woman is at a loss to know. "Mopsy" having been merely a puppy, as it proved, is growing rapidly, and being a street cur, his bad habits are incurable. It is not thought desirable to throw him out, lest it embarrass an explanation with the giver, when the eligible bachelor comes back from Baltimore, where he has been for the past three weeks, and he will be sure to ask to see his gift, and a scene will be unavoidable.

A GLIMPSE OF GLADSTONE.

How the "Grand Old Man" Impressed a New-Yorker.

A New-Yorker thus describes his first glimpse of Gladstone: "A raw afternoon late in October I was standing on a street corner in the little village of Salfrey, a suburb of Chester, with several hundred men, women and children, all of whom were looking up the long avenue that led to the city. The houses were decorated with bunting, and across the street hung a banner, 'Welcome to Salfrey.' A shout suddenly went up from the crowd as a carriage with a single horse appeared at the head of the avenue. A coachman in a long white overcoat sat on the box, there was no footman. Both coachman and horse seemed accustomed to the babel of hurrahs, and the waving of hats and flags that assailed the carriage from each side as it passed along."

"The top of the carriage was thrown back, and in the back seat, alone, sat Gladstone, who had come to this place to perform the 'neighborly duty' of opening a library for workmen. As he sat in his hand the venerable old man was bowing and smiling to every one. The first thing that struck me was his keen, quick glance of his eye, which seemed to enter into everything. As he stepped from the carriage I was surprised to see how erect he stood, with what vigor he walked to the committee rooms. I was prepared to see something petulant in the hall where the address was to be delivered by hearing an old Welshman say: 'I tell you, it's fine inside.' My disappointment was not increased when I entered a room was tent with sawdust floor and hard wooden benches, while the two ends were left open, and through them the wind blew a small hurricane, chilling us to the marrow. The room was raised to about the level of the chairs, and besides Mr. W. E. Gladstone and the dignitaries of the place, the statesman's son, who is rector at Hawarden, and his wife were seated on the platform. I could not help feeling what an outrage it was to ask a man in his 80th year to speak in a place cold enough to endanger the health of a stronger person."

"The exercises opened by the presentation of an address written by a workman and bound in blue watered silk. When Mr. Gladstone rose to speak his frame, which is almost massive, seemed to defy the inclemency of the place. When he commenced speaking he grasped the lapels of his coat in an awkward manner and hesitated more than you would expect in such a veteran of parliamentary debate. But as he grew more earnest all appearance of awkwardness earned all appearance of awkwardness. He spoke with no delay for choice of words, and the audience listened spell-bound. He had a peculiar way of drawing back the corners of his mouth just before he began to speak, as if he were trying to get a purchase upon the sentence he was commencing. Whenever he made a humorous point the smile would linger on his face but for a moment. He spoke with intense, and most fierce earnestness throughout the address, and during the hour and a half that he talked there was no sign of breaking in his voice, which was remarkably clear for a man of his age. After the style of an English audience satisfaction was expressed by 'hear! hear!'"

"Soon after this we visited Hawarden and met Gladstone's cousin, Mr. Gladstone, and spoke pleasantly of the many American pilgrims who annually visit his country seat."

ONE CAN'T BE TOO CAREFUL.

Always Read Your Letters the Second Time Before Sending Them.

According to the Liverpool Courier, it is always difficult to make people appreciate the fact—which is certainly a fact—that things said in the black-and-white foreword and permanence of a letter are far more effective than they could have been if they had been spoken. The writer meant them just as he would have meant them had he said them, and he does not in the least reflect that by the loss of accent, look and gesture the thing he writes may be widely different from the thing he would have said.

There have been countless quarrels engendered by things written in all innocence and which would have had no such effect had they been delivered by the living voice.

People vent their petulance in writing, and easily correct the impression by following it with a smile or a look, or a glance that softens or a word which modifies. All of these things are, of course, wanting in the case of a letter. The words tell for their own sake, and in the absence of the writer there is nothing to moderate the annoyance to which they give rise.

Crop Can Be Prevented.

We want every mother to know that crop can be prevented. There is no question about this; as it has been done in thousands of cases, and you may depend upon it that when a child takes the crop, it is wholly owing to the negligence of its parents. True crop never appears without due and timely warning; a few hours or a day or two before the attack, the child becomes hoarse. This hoarseness is the first indication of crop, and is a sure sign that crop is to follow, unless promptly and properly treated. The free use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as directed with each bottle under the heading, "to prevent crop," will dispel all symptoms of the disease. The first sign of crop, hoarseness, may be overlooked by young mothers or those not familiar with the disease. Under such circumstances, or when not properly treated, the hoarseness becomes more marked and the child shows symptoms of having taken cold, then a peculiar cough is developed. Even at this stage Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will prevent the crop, but after the cough has been developed, the crop is liable to appear at any moment. The proper way is to keep a bottle of this remedy at hand. It costs but fifty cents and only a few doses, or at most, not over one-third of a bottle is required to dispel all symptoms of the disease. Can you afford to risk so much for so little? There is not the least danger in giving this remedy in large and frequent doses, which are always retained, it contains no injurious substance. As a proof of this fact, we refer to John L. Olson, of Des Moines, Ia., whose 10-year-old boy drank the entire contents of a fifty-cent bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy without the least injury. For sale by H. M. Parthen & Co.

Mr. Keyes said that he was thinking seriously of taking a suitable place in New York or Brooklyn and starting a regular aviary when he had saved some more money.

A Good Cough Syrup.

There is nothing parents should be so careful about as selecting a cough syrup. Begets Cherry Cough Syrup, costs no more than a bottle of any other cough syrup, and is as good as any. The best is not too good, be sure and get BEGG'S CHERRY COUGH SYRUP. We keep it on hand at all times. R. S. Hale & Co.

The Verdict Unanimous.

W. D. Suit, druggist, Bippis, Ind., testifies: "I can recommend Electric Bitters as the very best remedy. Every bottle sold has given relief in every case. One man took six bottles and was cured of rheumatism of ten years' standing." Abraham Hine, druggist, Belleville, Ohio, affirms: "The best selling medicine I have ever handled in my twenty years' experience, is Electric Bitters." Thousands of others have added their testimony, so that the verdict is unanimous that Electric Bitters do cure all diseases of the liver, kidneys or stomach. Only half a bottle at R. S. Hale & Co.'s drug store.

Unsurpassed in the World.

The vestibular trains of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway, running daily between St. Paul and Minneapolis and Milwaukee and Chicago, are the perfection of modern railway equipment, and unsurpassed in the world. They consist of elegant day coaches, Pullman's latest and best sleeping cars and the finest dining cars in the country. These trains are lighted by electricity and heated by steam, and afford to the traveler every comfort and convenience to be had at the very best hotels. All classes of tickets are honored on these trains, and the rates are no higher than by other lines. It is for this reason that discriminating travelers patronize this company and insist that their tickets read over its line, as they naturally want the best service for their money.

Woman's Discovery.

"Another wonderful discovery has been made, and that, too, by a lady in this country. Disease fastened its clutches upon her and for seven years she withstood its severest tests, but her vital organs were undermined and death seemed imminent. For three months she coughed incessantly and could not sleep. She bought of us a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption and was so much relieved on taking the first dose that she slept all night and with one bottle has been miraculously cured. Her name is Mrs. Luther Lutz. This writes W. C. Hamrick & Co. of Shelby, N. C. Get a free trial bottle at R. S. Hale & Co.'s drug store."

Continually on the strain, or overtaxed at intervals, is far less desirable than ordinary vigor perpetuated by rational diet and exercise, and abstention from excess. Professional pugilists and athletes rarely attain old age. As ordinary vigor may be retained a wise regard for sanitary living and for the protection against disease which timely and judicious medication affords, so also may labor, uninterrupted mental strain, and foolish eating and drinking habits, and most immediate sequence of all four being dyspepsia. For this condition, then, or in any way induced, and for its offspring, a failure of nerve power, Headache, Stomach Bitters is the prime and most general of remedies. Not only indigestion, but loss of flesh, appetite and sleep are remedied by it. Inept malnutrition and rheumatism are banished, and kidney, bowel and liver complaint removed by it.

The above bright and benevolent face, is Dr. A. W. Acker, of England, discoverer of the celebrated Acker's English Remedy for Consumption and other popular preparations. Dr. Acker practiced in his younger days among the middle classes of London, and was the means of doing great good, but his health failed and he found himself in the grasp of consumption, with a wife and child depending upon him for support. While in this condition, he discovered the celebrated English Remedy, saved his own life and has since saved the lives of thousands who were on the sure road to death. Any man or woman who feels a tickling in the throat, who coughs, especially in the morning, who raises or has a tight feeling across the chest, who has sharp shooting pains through the lungs or difficulty in breathing, should realize that these are the first symptoms of consumption, if neglected, are sure to result fatally. Dr. Acker's English Remedy has cured more than one thousand persons who unquestionably had consumption and who were given up by their friends. It merits its popularity and is sold by reputable druggists in every city and town in America. You can't afford to be without it.

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable causing distress after eating, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn, loss of appetite, faint, "all gone" feeling, bad taste, coated tongue, and irregularity of bowels. Dyspepsia does not get well of itself. It requires careful attention, and a remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acts gently, yet effectively, it tones the stomach, regulates the digestion, creates a good appetite, banishes heartburn, and refreshes the mind.

Sick Headache

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat did me little good. After eating I would have a faint or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble was aggravated by any business, painting. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, which did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced." GEORGE A. PAGE, Watertown, Mass.
